Chalet
Méribel,
French Alps,
France

12 guests · 6 bedrooms · 7 bathrooms · 450 sqm

Located near a road called La Renarde, at barely 60 meters from the slopes, the Chalet welcomes everyone with its typical workmanship composed of wood, stone and slate from Savoie. Its intertwined roofs and multiple floors goes along the traditional methods of constructions.

The heart of the house is arranged on the second floor with the living, the dining and the kitchen areas. Surrounded by large bay-windows, the spaces are widely open on each other. The fireplace knows how to attract with its warmth but also with its impressive stone lintels. All their beauty is revealed once sat in the comfortable beige, taupe and grey leathered sofas. Near the dining room where a solid wood table precedes range cookers and copper kitchenware, a massive bell is suspended on a wooden-beam.

On the first floor three-double and two children bedrooms with adjoined bathrooms can be found. The simple pleated cotton sheets ornamented of multipoint embroidery and thick wool coverlet guarantees soothing nights. Three colour tones predominates each room: brown, beige and taupe vivified with a subtle touch of bright red. On the third floor, the master's bedroom is drenched in light and faces the enchanted mountains. The bathroom combines wood and sand marble.

Ground floor grants a grey-tiled spa including a lap pool and a hammam. The cellar was carved directly into the mountain.
